EVE SAVILLE MEMORIAL LECTURE

Dysfunctional societies: why inequality matters

Professor Richard Wilkinson University of Nottingham
The Great Hall, King's College London
1 July 2008 from 6 to 7pm

Why does Britain perform badly on everything from obesity to prison populations, from teenage birth rates to child well-being? Research shows that some societies do worse than others on almost every social indicator. This lecture will demonstrate that there are clear explanations which are crucial to the real quality of life for all of us.
